Teen Tech Show

On 19th March 2010, JVC supported Teen Tech, a technology event set up to inspire students in years 8 and 9 at school in the value of studying Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics. The event was hosted by Maggie Philbin, a key presenter of the highly popular TV show 'Tomorrows World' in the 1980s.

The event is held every year and supported by over 30 businesses. Each business had the opportunity to show their company and products to over 300 selected schools in a controlled environment. JVC had the opportunity to show some of its key technologies, such as 3D technology and key products from the 2010 range such as the GZ-HM1 camcorder and the LT-32WX50 ultra-slim LCD.

JVC gave away three JVC Piccio high definition pocket memory cameras to students who had to enter the stand competition to have a chance of winning the prizes.
