New JVC Sophisti Advanced Living Entertainment Systems
NX-F30 and NX-F40

Refined design and pure simplicity provide a new sense of living

JVC today announced the two Living Entertainment Systems of a different colour, the new NX-F30 and NX-F40. Both offer high performance with easy-to-use touch panel operation, simple set-up and connectivity options. The systems provide pleasurable high quality sound, all wrapped in elegant design with blue illumination and small discrete speakers

The DVD receiver features HDMI connection with CE control and 1080p up-conversion and USB Host with direct music recording. The touch panel control keys offer simple but special and effective usability by illuminating just the necessary keys depending on the selected source.

Cables are hard-wired to each speaker, and the coloured plug on the other end matches the terminal on the main unit, simplifying connection drastically.

The speakers use a JVC original "Anisotropic" diaphragm that provides a broader sound field than a conventional diaphragm, by propagating sound with different properties depending on direction.

Other features include Dolby Digital/DTS Decoders, FM tuner featuring Radio Data System, and Clear Voice Function circuitry to ensure clearer dialogue.
